Does material reality (matter, bodies, the physical world) really exist?
Does spiritual reality (not composed of matter) really exist?
Are perfect unchanging ideas part of spiritual reality?
Are souls and intelligences part of spritual reality?
Are souls immortal?
When souls are not individuated by being "in" a body (e.g. before or after death), are indistinguishable?
Is matter a lesser imperfect form of reality than spirit and dependent ontologically upon it?
Does the material world by its nature exit in time and is subject to change.
Is there a god?
Is there more than one god?
Does god know everything (is he omniscient)?
Can god do anything (is he omnipotent)?
Is god necessarily bound by the laws of logic or the essences (natures) of things?
Is god the most perfect entity morally best, most beautiful?
Is god good because he meets the objective standards of goodness, rather than being good because what makes something good is that he decides that it is?
Are there three persons in god the father, son, and holy spirit (the trinity)?
Does the holy spirit proceed from both the father and the son, rather than just the father?
Does the son have two natures that of god and man rather than the one human nature?
Does god reside in a place or state of eternal bliss called heaven?
Is there a hierarchy of "heavens" or levels to heaven?
Does heavenly bliss consist of the knowledge of god (i.e. the beatific vision)?
Are there angels in heaven?
Do angels have free will?
Did some angels (devils) sin and thereby earning eternal punishment?
Is there a place or state of eternal punishment called hell where devils (if there are any) reside?
Does the punishment of hell consist of fire?
Does the punishment of hell consist of knowledge of the deprivation of the beatific vision?
Did god create the world out of nothing (ex nihilo)?
Did he create the world out of free will rather than necessity?
Did god create angels, humans and the world out of love?	П
